

Salisbury Shakers

Six members of the Salisbury Shakers met in Salisbury Playhouse on Saturday 20th July.

Over coffee, we made plans for attending 'Relatively Speaking', a play by Alan Ayckbourn. Eight of us have tickets for this play on 21st September, and, at the same time, we booked seven seats for the pantomime, Robin Hood, on 30th November.

A new member, perhaps!

When Sheelagh went to the desk to purchase the tickets, the young woman in charge got chatting and asked about our group. She went on to say that her hands shook quite badly and she is unable to carry hot drinks. Her brother has the same problem. Both find that alcohol helps the shaking but neither of them has ever investigated the cause. We passed on some literature and promised to email more details. These shakers get everywhere!

Business accomplished, we made our way to the Salisbury Warehouse, which is a large, two-storey emporium selling a huge range of second hand retro/vintage items as well as a few new commodities such as greetings cards and coasters. We found a coaster which 'spoke' to quite a number of us – Moira is holding it in the photo above. It states, 'Alcohol will make it all better.' I

The Warehouse has a café attached which sells lovely home made cakes and a large range of delicious snacks. Four of us stayed for lunch there before going on our way.

Next meeting

The next meeting for the Salisbury Shakers will be on 7th September and we will meet, once again, in St Thomas's Church.

If there is anybody who would like to join us for either of the performances at the Playhouse, please let me know soon as there are some tickets left at the moment.
